

This index was compiled for those people who have downloaded books from 'Internet Archive' and not for those people who have hard copy books.

In paper books the tradition is to compile the index by listing say 'Abbott, Fred' and then a page no, but because my e-books don't follow the page number sequence method I have chosen to list the index in the same manner as the names or words appear in the e-books being 'Fred Abbott' and then to ask readers to use their search function to find the phrase which at the best of times is much more convenient and faster.

When I did the first few books I did not follow this rule and I propose to rectify my error when time permits. Just remember to search for what would logically be the phrase that would appear in the body of the book.

When Lawrence GREEN was asked to write his biography he replied "Read all my books and you have read my autobiography," he smiled good naturedly. "There's a great deal of me in each, there is little left to add."

John YATES-BENYON, who had known GREEN from his own age of six years until GREEN's death, then took it upon himself to write GREEN's biography. This book can be downloaded by searching on this link; Memories of a Friendship

All the books of Lawrence Green's which have been converted to e-books can be found by Searching on this link: <http://tinyurl.com/oztqarc>
